The post is said to be worth about 1, 000. The charms of Glamorgan are asserted in the following triad: --The Bard loves this beautiful country, Its wines, its wives, and its white houses. Italy has been compared to a boot, Oxfordshire to a seated old dame, and the same school of geographers has likened the general form of Glamorganshire to a porpoise. Roath represents the mouth, Ruperra its prominent snout, Blaen-Rhymney and Waen-caegyrwyn its dorsal fins, the peninsular of Gower its outstretched-tail, and the hundred of Dinas Powis its protuberant belly. We can no more boast of The docile oxen team Glamorgan breed of high esteem, And long the farmers pride; The good-boys song with wit replete, Sonorous sound, but often sweet, While trudging by their side. Hospitality in Glamorgarn. in former days was to a great extent measured by...
