I d love tr set up housekeeping in that blasted old de Beaujeu quarters. I d like to do a month s fishing, and hunting and courting about here. Where would you have better, lad? and what more lovely courting material could you find than Captain Pipe s sweet daughter? Blamed if she isn t the-- Yes, yes! but do you think, sir, Braddock will lake the fort so easy? There s a deal of Indians camping aroimd, and all seem very confident hereabouts. Look here, Jimmy! you and I ll have to quarrel, straight, if you even hint that doubt again. You don t know Braddock; why, I ve seen him, in Hyde Park, wheel and turn and manoeuvre his Cold Streams in a space no bigger than a parlor floor, and never a jar, or hitch, or interference--just like a well-oiled piece of machinery. Why, he s confessed the best drill-master in Europe! Now, what chance will a set of raw Canadians, chasseeing Prcnchers, and breech-clouted savages have against such veterans?--each as steady as an oak and as cool as a small iceberg! In the words of the great dramatist, I pause for a reply; But come! let s to sleep, and early to-morrow we ll send for Dumas. So saying, the two laid them down on the robes so considerately provided for them by the Captain, and were soon fast locked in slumber....
