Not illustrated. 1910 Excerpt: . when it is cured we return them to the environment which led to its formation. A folly to laugh over were it not so sad and bitter in its results. It may seem to be a long story from defective children to adult inebriates, but the adult inebriates were children once. We have got too much into the way of considering children as a race apart; we do not remember that they are a product of the last generation and will be the producers of the next. It is by so incompletely remembering this that we do so much charitable mischief. I have dwelt at some length upon this question of drink in connection with weakness of mind, because I am sure that no more important contribution to our knowledge of the subject has for some time been made than this definite evidence, put forward by acknowledged experts, who were approaching the history of the derelict humanity from a standpoint quite different from mine and that of my fellowworkers, that drunkenness is very frequently a symptom and not a cause of weakness of mind. To come to the question of employment. In England, of late years, we have had a remarkable object lesson in the number of children who are leaving our Day Special Schools. There are about one hundred and eighty of these schools, accommodating between eleven and twelve thousand children. If we remember the numbers of the feeble-minded, we shall see that nearly...
